What careers might this help with?

accounts assistant

They help record what money is coming in and going out, such as invoices and receipts. They might check that payments have been made, help prepare bills to send to customers, and keep files organised. They often use a computer and spreadsheets, and they make sure the numbers are correct so the business knows what it can afford.

warehouse supervisor

Someone who helps run a warehouse and makes sure everything is organised and working safely. They look after the team, give out jobs, and check that goods are picked, packed, and sent out correctly. They make sure deliveries are stored in the right place, keep track of stock, and solve problems if something is missing or damaged. They also help everyone follow safety rules and use equipment properly.

events assistant

An events assistant is someone who helps plan and run events so everything goes smoothly. They help set up rooms, organise equipment and materials, and make sure guests know where to go. They might help with sending invitations, checking lists, putting up signs, and supporting during the event with jobs like greeting people or sorting refreshments. They work with a team and solve small problems quickly to help the event run well.
